Bead Memory Post-Pre Test Differences

In a controlled experiment, children who completed a Kindermusik class showed improved spatial-temporal reasoning scores over children in a control group. This means they showed significant improvement in their abstract reasoning skills, on a task that measured both visual imagery and sequencing strategies. This type of thinking is essential for mastering mathematics and science. This study was done with 4-6 year old children in two Head Start programs, 4 preschools and a music center. A range of socioeconomic levels was represented, including some ethnic diversity.

Self-Control Study

Eighty-nine three-and-four year-old children (42 who had been enrolled in Kindermusik music and movement classes, and 47 demographically similar children who had not experienced structured early childhood music classes) completed a battery of self-regulation tasks and a selective attention task during which children's private speech was reliably transcribed and categorized. Children currently enrolled in Kindermusik classes showed better self-regulation than those who were not currently enrolled and they also used more relevant private speech during the selective attention task, a verbal strategy that was positively related to performance. Children exposed to the music program were also more likely to engage in the facilitative strategy of singing/humming to themselves during a waiting period in which they had to inhibit their desire to examine a gift, were less likely to call out to the experimenter, a strategy negatively associated with performance and self-regulation.

Osceola County, Florida 2008 Study

An effectiveness study focused on ABC Music & Me was completed in Osceola County, Florida in 2008. The school used the program from January through May 2008 with 206 diverse, language-delayed, Pre-K students. Two times during the year (January/mid-year, and May/post-year), teachers used a 4-point scale (0-3) to score each student's demonstration of behaviors within each skill area. The assessment is complete with findings that there were language learning gains above the 70% significance level. The following table reports the percentage of students with improved scores.

Central Florida 2009-2010 Study

The ABC Music & Me program has served more than 2,400 Pre-K and Kindergarten students and approximately 200 teachers in special education classrooms in a central Florida county school district since 2007. From September 2009 to May 2010, educators in over 60 classrooms in 45 schools gathered and submitted pre-year, mid-year, and post-year data representing approximately 460 special needs students using ABC Music & Me. Each student was observationally assessed by his or her teacher in early literacy and language skills development, self-control, music skills, and gross- and fine-motor ability. Three times during the year (September/pre-year, February/mid-year, and May/post-year), teachers used a 4-point scale (0-3) to score each student's demonstration of behaviors within each skill area. Cumulative annual results are highlighted below. Note that over 80% of students improved or maintained highest category scores across the year.
